This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1921 edition. Excerpt: ...of navigation adopted by Congress cannot reasonably be made to answer various local requirements in ports and rivers within the states, and that the several states retain and 'have full power to regulate within their limits, matters of internal policy,' which includes regulation of navigation in a water way like the Chicago river, crowded with shipping and spanned by numerous bridges, in the midst of a great commercial metropolis. So under the sanction of the state, the city of Chicago is authorized to regulate use of the bridges and river within the city, in accordance with local conditions, and needs 'until Congress interferes and super-sedes' such regulation. 'If the Power of the state and that of the federal government come in contact, the latter must control and the former must yield?' but 'until Congress acts upon the subject' municipal regulation for 'local purposes is within the anthem.' of the state." This ruling was reaffirmed and the doctrine applied in Cumming v. Chicago, 188 U. s. 410, 23 Sui-Ct. 472, 47 L. ed. 525. This presumption is fortified by evidence in the present record of the existence of such public opinion, and neither the character nor the extent of testimony introduced by the plaintiff tending to disprove such necessity for use of tugs in event of their steamers as if imposed by the ordinance, and tending to show unreasonable delays and expense (he;eby imposed, can furnish sanction for the annulment of the ordinance by judicial decree, but; believe, under the established rule of the federal jurisdiction-' Canada Atlantic Transit Co. v. Chicago, 210 Fed....
