My Gypsy Life: A road to happiness Rhona Villanueva

Rhona Brasche Villanueva, born 1934 in Tallinn, Estonia in politically restless times, tells of life in Estonia, and their decision to emigrate to Germany before the start of WW II. Rhona shows how she and her mother survived the bombings in Berlin and finally fled from the advancing Russian army, meanwhile her father is a pilot in the German Luftwaffe. She relates her family's move to Santiago, Chile, in search of peace and security. Rhona completes her education, adjusts to new customs and Latin-ways-of-life, and becomes fluent in Spanish. In 1961 she leaves her family and moves to Southern California and eventually settles in Orange County, where she and her husband currently live near their children and grandchildren.
