Excerpt from Cheerful to-Days and Trustful to-Morrows

She was not young and her path had been rough and steep, this dear little mother whose sweet face shines upon me, out of the dim past, like a beautiful beaming star. It was a face which kept to old age something of its childish sweetness and eagerness of expression, for to this dear one it was given never to lose the child heart, and it was, and is, unto such as she that our blessed Lord has always revealed the inner meaning of the Kingdom. Wistful and loving and animated, let cares and burdens be ever so numerous, it was hers to know the full blessedness of that text, "The beloved of the Lord shall dwell in safety by him." Her sorrows had been many.
